For women, voters prefer pretty: Study

ELECTION Women running for top offices need to appear competent and attractive, says a new study. For men, seeming competent may be enough.

It's a finding that could help justify heavy spending on clothing for Republican vice-presidential nominee Sarah Palin, while raising questions about the need for John Edwards to invest in a costly haircut.

The study found that for male candidates, the only thing that mattered to male voters was competence, while female voters preferred competence and approachability.

But for "female candidates for a hypothetical election for the United States presidency, both male and female voters were more likely to vote for candidates that were both competent and attractive," said Joan Y. Chiao of Northwestern University.

New faces, new focus

Ontario, female MPs get bigger slice of 'economically' minded cabinet

Prime Minister Stephen Harper has tapped three Ontario politicians — all veterans of Mike Harris's old cabinet — to steer Canada through tough economic times.

Harper shook up his cabinet yesterday, keeping Jim Flaherty as finance minister but putting Tony Clement in charge of Industry and John Baird in transport.

Baird wasted little time putting a priority on the billions of dollars earmarked for infrastructure, saying such investments will be a critical tool to create jobs and sustain the economy in the downturn.

"We are committed to working constructively to see infrastructure projects go," Baird said, soon after being sworn in.

Clement knows he is under pressure to help revive Ontario's flagging manufacturing sector.

"I will be focusing in on our businesses, on our manufacturers, not only in Ontario but throughout the country," Clement said.

Harper made clear his new cabinet, which features more women and MPs from the Greater Toronto Area than the previous cabinet, was designed with one overriding goal — to cope with an economic storm that even he admitted is growing more unpredictable.

Harper touted his bigger cabinet — he added six new positions — as an "experienced, economically focused team."

Harper added 11 women — eight as full ministers and three as junior ministers — setting a record for female representation.

In the GTA, in addition to Flaherty, Halton MP Lisa Raitt was added as natural resources minister, Peter Kent, newly elected MP for Thornhill, becomes minister of state of foreign affairs for the Americas. Peter Van Loan (York-Simcoe) was promoted, moving from government house leader to minister of public safety.

There are 13 ministers from Ontario, about a third of the 38-member cabinet, perhaps reward for a province that elected 51 Conservative MPs on Oct. 14, up 11 since the last election.

Canada earns 'D' on innovation report card

RANKINGS Canada continues to underperform in the practice of putting good ideas into practical commercial practice that would help the country's economy, the Conference Board of Canada says.

The private-sector think-tank places Canada 13th among 17 advanced economies in its latest report card on innovation, giving it a poor D grade.

"We have been getting D grades since the 1980s."
Gilles Rheaume

"We have been getting D grades on innovation since the 1980s," said Gilles Rheaume, the board's vice-president of public policy.

"Canada's good ideas are not being turned into products or services that we can sell to world markets, at least not by Canadians."

He said while Canada produces good science through its universities, engineering schools, teaching hospitals and technical institutes, it does not have the policies and practices to commercialize the innovations.

The research group gives the United States, Switzerland and Ireland the top A grade and places the U.S. first for fostering top science and engineering faculties, broad and deep capital markets, an entrepreneurial culture and support for innovative firms.

No private donors?

The City of Toronto seems to have put aside plans to raise money from private donors to redesign Nathan Phillips Square. When the city approved the square's redesign 19 months ago, councillors were told $25 million of the $42.7 million cost would come from private donations. But the city's capital budget, released yesterday, shows that all the funds will come from the city. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

$1.6B budget leans on investing

Now is not the time to cut infrastructure spending, Mayor David Miller said yesterday at the rollout of Toronto's $1.6 billion capital budget.

The capital budget — devoted to repairs and maintenance of city facilities — is about the same as this year's, but the money may go further if construction labour and materials costs drop in the current economic climate, Miller said.

The city's net debt is anticipated to rise to $2.7 billion at the end of 2009, from $2.6 billion now.

The budget earmarks money over the next five years for new signals to curb overcrowding on the Yonge subway; complete new waterfront parks in Mimico and Port Union; and build community centres.

The plan also includes money for new child care centres, repairs to Union Station and adding deep-lake-water cooling to the station, plus purchases of hybrid vehicles.

Councillors and the public can offer comments on the proposed plan on Nov. 5 at city hall before it goes to city council for approval Dec. 10.

Miller's administration also has found $8 million to expand the bike-lane network next year.

The city's $8 billion-plus operating budget for 2009 will be finalized next spring. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

TTC workers retain right to strike

VOTE Toronto City Council voted narrowly 23-22 against declaring the TTC an essential service yesterday, thanks to a surprise vote cast by Coun. Doug Holyday, a right-wing councillor. Had Holyday voted the other way, the motion would have carried, and the province would have been asked to make the declaration — essentially banning TTC workers from striking.

"I think there's a better way. It's a serious matter to be taking away someone's labour rights. That's what this was all about," Holyday told reporters afterward. "We don't have to do anything overnight. We have time to look at the situation a little closer," he said. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

City hospitals ration blood

Toronto hospitals are closely guarding their stocks of blood as Canada's donated blood reserves drop to dangerously low levels.

"We are not to the point where we have to cancel surgeries, but we are actively rationing blood," said Jacob Pendergrast, a laboratory physician with the blood transfusion service at Toronto's University Health Network.

Canadian Blood Services warned this week that rising demand coupled with dwindling donations has caused their inventory to drop 40 per cent over the last two months. On Tuesday, with only two days worth of the most common blood types in their reserve, the agency began to ration blood to hospitals.

"We've never seen such serious reports of national blood levels in a very long time," said Pendergrast.

Each of the three hospitals at the University Health Network — Toronto General, Toronto Western and Princess Margaret — is reviewing every transfusion request to see if any can be deferred until reserves are replenished, said Pendergrast.

"At this point we are meeting the demand of patients," he said.

Dr. Robert Howard, the chief medical officer at St. Michael's Hospital, said the shortage has not yet affected patient care at the hospital or caused officials to postpone elective surgeries.

Every drop counts

- According to Canadian Blood Services, 52 per cent of Canadians have needed blood for themselves or a family member, but only 3.7 per cent of eligible Canadians actually donate. And Toronto, despite its large population and concentration of top-notch hospitals, has one of the lowest donation rates in the country.

Theatrix Costume House has seen the same trends. The downtown Toronto store's biggest sellers are Indiana Jones, the Joker and Marie Antoinette (the 18th century French queen was the subject of a recent movie). TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Malton kids stay sharp despite risks

STUDY Though they face greater social and economic risks than kids in other communities, the percentage of Malton children deemed ready for kindergarten is equal to that of more privileged areas across Peel Region.

Why?

A new study shows that preschool development in this sometimes troubled neighbourhood remains steady, although the risk factors have increased by 10 per cent in the past five years.

The study is part of a federal government support project called Understanding the Early Years, launched in 16 high-risk communities nationwide including Malton, last February. The local study found that Malton is one of the most challenged areas in the GTA.

Yet Malton kindergarteners are slightly more likely to be ready for school — by about 1 per cent — than children in Mississauga overall.

Who's watching hand washing?

Hospital monitoring rapped

Almost all Ontario hospitals have implemented hand washing policies in a effort to lower rates of deadly hospital infections, but too few monitor whether staff follow proper procedures, according to a new report released yesterday.

The analysis by the Canadian Institute for Health Information found just 38 per cent of the 103 acute care hospitals that participated in the survey have a formal mechanism in place to monitor hand hygiene practices.

"Roughly 50 per cent of hospital-acquired infections in Canada could be gone if health officials washed their hands," said Dr. Michael Gardam, with the Ontario Agency for Health Protection and Promotion.

"Some 220,000 Canadians get these things every year. That's a substantial number of people who are dying needlessly, or patients with prolonged lengths of stay (in hospital), which makes the health system more inefficient." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Court told hockey group sex 'bonding experience'

TRIAL The two men David Frost is alleged to have sexually exploited as teens candidly acknowledged yesterday group sex is an accepted "bonding" practice in the hockey world, but emphatically denied their former coach took part in threesomes or manipulated their sexual behaviour.

The men were called as defence witnesses — unusual for alleged victims — and the prosecutor suggested that sex acts involving the players, their girlfriends and Frost did in fact happen, and that as two former members of Frost's "cult," they are now trying to protect him.

The last day of testimony at Frost's trial saw both alleged victims refute much of this week's testimony from their former girlfriends. The women, now 28, told court Frost held such sway over his players, holding the key to their hockey careers, that he could compel them to engage in various sex acts in the 1990s.

"It's like a bonding thing with your friends."
Hockey player

Frost, the ex-coach of the junior A Quinte Hawks, has pleaded not guilty to four counts of sexual exploitation relating to two of his former players who can't be named.

The first man to testify yesterday told the court group sex is common among hockey players. "It's like a bonding thing with your friends or teammates," he said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ben's wedded bliss

Though a rather outsized figure on television, entertainment show anchor Ben Mulroney kept his wedding decidedly small and understated.

Mulroney arrived by limousine in the frigid darkness for the evening ceremony at the soaring St. Patrick's Basilica in downtown Montreal. He didn't head into the impressive church, but rather through the sacristy door and into the tiny side chapel, which was adorned with three giant bouquets of white lilies and mums.

The sides of the chapel were lined with candles floating in water dishes.

In full celebrity glare, with cameras flashing and videographers' lenses trained on him, Mulroney said, "I feel great!" and that, after all, "It was my idea." Asked if he was nervous, he said, "I'm not one bit, I had a great night's sleep last night."

Just before him, the bride, Jessica Brownstein, wearing an iridescent white dress, arrived in a separate limo, her face glistening, framed by long, hanging ringlets. She didn't speak to waiting reporters.

Safety failure cause of Gainey death, report

PICTON CASTLE Bob Gainey said he felt a mix of deep sadness and bittersweet satisfaction as he read the findings of a Transportation Safety Board investigation that pinpointed safety failures behind the loss of his daughter from the tall ship Picton Castle.

"It is a case study for what happens when safety or risk management systems are not in place," the general manager of the Montreal Canadiens said in an interview with The Canadian Press.

Gainey praised the report released yesterday as a document that "everyone in the sail training industry should be reading closely so they can apply the lessons learned at the cost of a life."

A wave swept Laura Gainey off the Picton Castle on Dec. 8, 2006, as a mid-Atlantic storm raged and the ship rolled in the strong gale.

Hudson's nephew likely died in SUV, say Chicago police

DEATH Detectives believe the seven-year-old nephew of Jennifer Hudson was probably shot in the SUV where his body was later found, a police official said yesterday.

The bodies of the singer and Oscar-winning actress's mother, Darnell Donerson, and brother, Jason Hudson, were found Oct. 24 inside their Chicago home. Julian's body was discovered Monday in the SUV on the city's West Side. All three had been shot.

Bomb blasts rock India

Bombs planted in cars and rickshaws ripped through crowded markets in a co-ordinated attack yesterday in India's volatile northeast, killing at least 61 people and wounding more than 300.

The scale and planning behind the 13 blasts surprised authorities, who struggled to determine who was behind the attacks, among the worst in a region plagued by separatism, ethnic violence and Islamic militants.

The largest explosion took place near the office of Assam state's top government official, leaving bodies strewn across the road.

Bystanders dragged the wounded and dead to cars that took them to hospitals. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Women got a raw deal in U.S. election campaign

OmniVision

Rick McGinnis
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

This U.S. election cycle has been an ugly and divisive one, by any standards. As Canadians, we have the front rows on the bleacher seats for the big event, and get to see the blood and hear the broken bones much more intimately than most other countries. Still, we can't take part, but if anyone south of our border — or west of it, since Alaska has played a role of unprecedented prominence this time around — is listening, I have a suggestion to make, one offered with my tongue only slightly in cheek.

I am urging American women not to vote in this year's election. I realize that ignoring your franchise and rebuking the 19th Amendment — if only for one election — sounds absurd, especially in such a hotly contested election, but hear me out.

This has been an extraordinarily depressing election to witness, based on what I'm hearing from women on both sides of the political divide.

"I cannot predict who will win the presidential campaign," wrote women's rights advocate Helen McCaffrey in the Philadelphia Inquirer this week, "but I already know who will lose big: all women."

She describes a young male student at the community college where she teaches, wearing a "Sarah Palin Is A C__t" T-shirt "without shame or even consciousness of what he was doing." She recalls attending a Barack Obama rally where the mention of Palin's name "drew shouts of 'stone her.'" She laments that "instead of engaging Palin on the issues, critics attacked attributes that are specifically female. It is Hillary's pantsuit to the power of 10."

After this election, it's hard to imagine a bright woman in either party willingly allowing herself and her family to endure this gauntlet of character assassination.

It was hard to ignore the treatment Hillary Clinton got in the bitter fight for the Democratic nomination, almost entirely from members of the media and political classes that identified themselves as liberal, or as supporters of her party. After this election, it's hard to imagine a bright woman in either party willingly allowing herself and her family to endure this gauntlet of character assassination.

"Thank God for election 2008," lamented Wendy Button, a speechwriter for Clinton, John Edwards and Obama, on the Daily Beast political website.

"We can talk about the wardrobe and make-up even though most people don't understand the details about Senator Obama's plan with Iraq." A lifelong Democrat, she despairs at how her party has turned on two female candidates with such retrograde, belittling rhetoric.

It's neither likely nor perhaps even desirable, but if half of U.S. voters withdrew their franchise in protest, it would wreak havoc with pollsters and campaign operatives at the very least, and delegitimize a dispiriting and tainted election at best. It's a slap that would perhaps bring otherwise intelligent people back to their senses, and restore some decency to a process that has devolved into a shameful rebuke of a woman's right to participate in their country's political life.

Dead on arrival — or it's alive, it's alive!

John Wright

Watching yesterday's cabinet shuffle, one can only wonder if Mr. Harper has built something that will actually come alive — like Pinocchio, the little wooden boy created by the carpenter Geppetto.

What people tend to focus on, of course, is Pinocchio's nose, which grows when he tells a fib. But that's just the underscore of the story. The real and most astonishing thing is that he comes alive — that he lives, talks, dances and actually gets to do things, like all the other real children.

So, yesterday the prime minister created his own piece of woodwork, building a fairly large cabinet, already assessed by pundits as "bloated," full of "underperformers and newcomers," "a recognition of the GTA," "more women have a say," — with a slight emphasis on continuity.

After all, in these unsteady times, ministers of finance and defence keep their posts because their portfolios are battlefields — and the last thing you want to change is leadership mid-fight.

But far more germane to many a scribe is this: up until this moment, a gaggle of cabinet ministers hasn't mattered worth a hill o' beans to most. It's been about one guy named Harper who called all the shots — all the time. And, while prime ministers have the right to do that, it became apparent this one — and his enablers — was going to dictate script and pull every string. Not to be trusted, except for a couple, cabinet ministers were like sea captains who were given fine ships and crews — and sent off to sea, never to be heard from again.

But, as the summer began, there were some staff changes in the prime minister's office: old guard communicators and policy chiefs were out, new, albeit experienced, folks from Ontario, in. And just before the election we actually got to see one or two cabinet ministers actually talk to the media — seemingly independently.

But it was the morning after the election that political observers noticed a real sea change. At his press conference, the PM looked and sounded humble, even co-operative. Pundits cocked their ears: there was something definitely there — and it wasn't just weariness. Could this be the beginning of something new? Was the Ice Man thawing; warming the chill from the way things were run before?

So that's what the smart people are really wondering about in the aftermath of this shuffle. Is there really going to be more open, consensus building, a less partisan and less vociferous government and House of Commons?

The only way to know is to watch whether these cabinet ministers actually come alive, like Pinocchio, and voice their own thoughts — or whether Mister Geppetto will keep pulling the strings so tight his puppets will wish they were put to sea.

Orissa Abraham, TORONTO

When I read Paul Sullivan's article (Free speech isn't free, Oct. 29) on my way to work, I could not help but think, "Where IS our 'freedom of speech' going?"

They teach you this stuff in school and even show you the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, but these days especially with the election now over and history about to be made in the (United) States, it seems everyone has something to say, but is not willing to say it!

Sure, Canadian voters say, "You don't have a right to complain over anything that happens in this country if you did not vote."

I tell them that regardless of whether I vote or not, America's economy still dictates ours! I have nothing against Americans, and we have to find a way to stand on our own two feet without the U.S. as a crutch.

I am a strong, female, Canadian student who would like to know if it's time to pack it up and move on out, or stick it out with the rest of the millions of worried Canadians?

Amex planning to cut 7,000 jobs

CREDIT In a stark acknowledgment of the tough times ahead in the credit card industry, American Express said yesterday it plans to cut 7,000 jobs, or about 10 per cent of its worldwide work force, in an effort to slash costs by $1.8 billion US in 2009.

The New York-based credit card issuer said it is also suspending management level salary increases next year and instituting a hiring freeze. The job cuts will be across various business units, but will primarily focus on management positions, the company said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Exxon breaks record

Profit soars to $14.83 billion in third quarter

Exxon Mobil Corp., the world's largest publicly traded oil company, reported income yesterday that shattered its own record for the biggest profit from operations by a U.S. corporation, earning $14.83 billion US in the third quarter.

The Texas-based company has reported unprecedented back-to-back quarters, the end of the most recent coinciding with a rapid plunge in crude prices.

Oil prices fell another $2.21 to $65.29 yesterday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, about 56 per cent off record highs in July.

Exxon said net income jumped nearly 58 per cent to $2.86 a share in the July-September period, compared with $9.41 billion, or $1.70 a share, a year ago.

The previous record for U.S. corporate profit was set in the last quarter, when Exxon Mobil earned $11.68 billion.

Oil producers are coming off a quarter during which crude prices reached an all-time high of $147.27 — and their profits have reflected it. Crude prices, however, have quickly fallen 50 per cent from the summer's highs. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

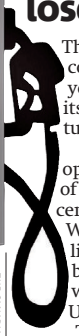
Loonie up as U.S. dollar loses steam



The Canadian dollar continued its revival yesterday, though its upward momentum slackened.

The currency opened with a gain of more than two cents on top of Wednesday's startling 3.67-cent surge, but by the close it was at 82.10 cents US, up 0.47 cent.

This left the loonie still below where it started last week, and down from 94 cents at the beginning of the month. It tumbled as low as 77.10 cents on Monday, its weakest level in more than four years, before Wednesday's bounce, the biggest ever for the loonie since it became a floating currency in 1970.

The loonie got support from the weakening of the U.S. dollar as the Federal Reserve cut its key rate. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The S&P/TSX composite index closed up 354.65 points to 9,856.21. The index now up more than 1,300 points since Monday but remains down from about 14,200 at the start of the year. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MALL London's biggest mall, which cost $2.5 billion US, opened yesterday despite the gloomy economic climate that threatens to dampen vital Christmas sales. With some 300 shops, 50 restaurants, and deluxe amenities, the mall is billed by its operators, the Australia-based Westfield Group, as one of the largest in the world. It projects 21 million people will shop in the mall each year. METRO NEWS SERVICES

Canadian auto sales buck trend

COMPACTS Canada's auto purchases grew 1.4 per cent through September compared with a 13 per cent slump in the U.S. and a 5 per cent drop in Western Europe, according to a Scotia Economics report.

The Canadian increase is almost entirely due to a 25 per cent surge in sales of subcompact cars and a 9 per cent rise in crossover sales. The bank says subcompacts account for a record 9 per cent of the Canadian market, up from about 5 per cent in the previous five years. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bosh careful talking politics

Although other athletes less diplomatic about leanings

Don't expect Raptors star Chris Bosh to become the next activist athlete.

While the big Texan says he's keenly interested in politics, he likes to keep his views to himself.

"I don't really get too political, 'cause that's a religion," Bosh said at practice yesterday, ahead of tonight's home opener against Golden State.

"People follow it very closely, it's a way of life for some people."

The six-foot-10 forward says he has filed his absentee vote in the U.S. presidential election, but he won't say whether he voted for Democrat Barack Obama or Republican John McCain.

In the past, he has identified himself as a Democrat. Still, the three-time all-star doesn't feel comfortable making his political opinions public.

"I never want to get political because people might judge you because of your political stance," he says. "So I just choose to leave that alone."

Bosh is remaining tight-lipped just as more NBA players are becoming more politically active. In 2007, Ira Newble, then a forward with the Cleveland Cavaliers, wrote a letter to the Chinese government, asking them "to use all available diplomatic resources and economic pressure to end the agony of Darfur, and to secure access for UN peace support personnel." He then persuaded most of the Cavaliers to sign it, with the notable exception of forward LeBron James.

Wizards centre Etan Thomas is a community and peace activist who released a book of poetry in 2005 and writes a blog for the left-leaning Huffington Post.

"It just shows how big it is if NBA guys are really participating," Bosh says. "It's a big race." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Herzog likes a neutral-site World Series

The weather woes in Philadelphia earlier this week are producing proposals for drastic changes to future World Series. Former major-league manager Whitey Herzog, for example, is leading a movement for Series to be played at neutral venues that could seat 75,000 spectators in domes or warm-weather stadiums. "You could call it World Series Week," Herzog said. "You've got the old school saying you'd take the Series away from the home fans and all that, but that's stupid since hometown fans (because of high ticket prices) don't get to see the World Series anyway."

Meet the latest Bond girl

RICK MCGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

Movie feature

Olga Kurylenko has joined a long line of iconic actresses who've assumed the mantle of Bond girl.

The Ukrainian-born model made an impressive debut in a series of French films before being cast in Quantum Of Solace as Camille, a Colombian out for revenge after the death of her parents — a revenge that ends up complimenting Daniel Craig's Bond's grieving quest to avenge the death of Vesper Lynd (Eva Green) at the end of Casino Royale.

What remains to be seen is whether Kurylenko will join the ranks of Bond co-stars such as Diana Rigg and Halle Berry for whom Bond meant merely a role, or disappear with Daniela Bianchi, Lois Chiles, Claudine Auger and Carey Lowell into Bond footnotes.

In either case, she'll have a unique place among the tiny minority of Bond co-stars who don't end up in bed with the British superspy.

"She's different," Kurylenko says about her Camille. "She's like a Bond in a female body. She's almost equal to him. What is nice is that in this film she has her own story — she exists without Bond. She has her own thing to do, her own mission. She's like his reflection."

As for Craig as Bond, Kurylenko has nothing but praise. "I thought he was one of the best Bonds. Everyone has their own opinion, but he's more believable. He's tough — you believe he can break your neck. They had to change, so he's a good one."

Quantum Of Solace director Marc Forster came to Bond from a very different place. The Swiss director is better known for more intimate, even arty films such as The Kite Runner and Monster's Ball. He echoes Kurylenko's assessment of what she brought to Bond.

"She's like a Bond in a female body. She's almost equal to him."
Olga Kurylenko

"I saw tapes from all over the world, beautiful women, but either they couldn't act in English, or they weren't real enough or didn't have any depth. And then I met 15 women in London, and I thought three or four were interesting, and I had them read with Daniel, and I thought Olga was the most truthful and would be a good mirror image for him."

As for Craig, Forster sees him as essential, and a key reason why he took on a film that even he thought was completely out of character for him.

"I think he just humanizes the character and grounds him. After Pierce Brosnan, it was important to go a hundred and eighty degrees opposite to try and reinvent him. To just mimic Pierce Brosnan, at that point I think the franchise was going to become a bit of a farce.

"It had to go totally to the opposite."

Daniel Craig and Olga Kurylenko star in Quantum of Solace, which opens Nov. 14.

Zack and Miri sweet and raunchy

Zack and Miri Make a Porno

Director: Kevin Smith
Stars: Seth Rogan, Elizabeth Banks
Classification: 18A
Rating: ●●●½

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Zack And Miri Make A Porno hits screens amidst a sea of controversy. The initial poster was banned in America and several multiplexes are refusing to play the film … and all because the word "porno" is in the title.

If any of the offended parties actually watched the film, they would discover that it is actually a very sweet romantic comedy about two best friends discovering their love for one another. Granted, they discover it while having sex on camera for a quick buck — but it is very sweet nonetheless.

Seth Rogen and Elizabeth Banks play the title duo in Kevin Smith's Zack and Miri Make a Porno.

There's only one man who could have made this movie, and that's Kevin Smith. Ever since his inspirational micro-budget debut, Smith has been the reining master of raunchy dialogue-driven comedies-with-heart.

Over the last few years, the writer/director has seen his once-controversial style enter the mainstream thanks to filmmaker Judd Apatow. But rather than be upset, Smith has welcomed members of the Apatow ensemble into his team. Seth Rogen, Elizabeth Banks, Justin Long, and Craig Robinson have joined Smith veterans Jason Mewes and Jeff Anderson to create one of the best movies of Smith's career.

Summarizing the plot is pointless because the title says it all. It's also a good litmus test. If the title makes you laugh, you'll probably enjoy the movie. The film is every bit as raunchy and hilarious as you'd imagine.

Make no mistake: this is a silly R-rated comedy that certainly won't go down as one of the greatest films ever made. But the characters are so well drawn, the underlying message so sweet, and the jokes so consistently funny.

Hollywood satire authentic, subtle

What Just Happened?

Director: Barry Levinson
Stars: Robert De Niro, Robin Wright Penn
Classification: 14A
Rating: ●●●½

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Based on Art Linson's 2002 memoir, What Just Happened? stars Robert De Niro as an overburdened big-wig Hollywood producer trying to stay on top in a slippery industry where stardom rules all.

Not only must Ben (De Niro) battle drug-addled directors, gutless agents, ruthless studio heads and a bearded Bruce Willis — playing himself as an impossible egomaniac — but he must do so while comforting a withdrawn daughter and trying to make amends with his estranged wife.

It's not the first comedy to skewer the absurdities of Hollywood. Robert Altman's The Player and HBO's Entourage are just two other great examples of Tinseltown taking itself out at the knees, but director Barry Levinson has been part of the machine for more than 30 years and knows the industry well.

Robert De Niro

As such, he puts together an authentic, subtle comedy that gives De Niro just enough rope to display the acting prowess he seemingly left behind long ago.

However, while it's a fun-filled glimpse at the long-depleted art of filmmaking, the story ultimately never reveals what motivates Ben in such an unrewarding industry. One can only assume it's the prophetic words he reads on a monstrous movie poster stripped of title and credits for just a giant box-office earning.

"In the end," Ben tells his director, it's "just a number. A big number."

Also in theatres

- Also opening this week is the horror film The Haunting of Molly Hartley. There are no pre-screenings of the movie, but read Monday's edition of Metro for a full review.

Comedians animate Madagascar sequel

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Movie feature

What do Ben Stiller, Chris Rock and Cedric the Entertainer have in common? If you guessed they all deliver the funniest lines in the new animated hit Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa, you'd only be partly right.

Returning to their respective vocal roles from 2005's huge family hit, Madagascar, those funnymen — along with no less than three other voice talents — all come from a stand-up comedy background.

"(Producers are) looking for somebody that can make whatever they write funny or funnier somehow," insists Cedric the Entertainer. "I think the idea is that (comedians) can at least bring it to life because that's the hardest part about it: (voicing) in a room, doing it by yourself with nobody else to bounce it off of."

It's true. Like most animated films, Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa – in theatres next Friday — recorded most of its performances separately.

Sure, it sounds like an easy gig — you read your part, collect a cheque and go home — but as Ben Stiller attests, it's not that simple.

"I think the key is you want it to be fun," says the actor. "If you go (into the recording studio) and you're down or if you're low energy or you're not into it that day then it's not going to be a good session and you're probably going to have to come back."

David Schwimmer, Jada Pinkett Smith, Ben Stiller and Chris Rock have returned to their voice-roles in Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa.

This comedy is definitely not short on spirit. Stuck in Madagascar, Alex the lion (Stiller), Marty the zebra (Rock) and the rest of the Manhattan zoo-raised crew try to return home only to get as far as Africa, where they soon discover their roots.

As with the first film, the jokes are fast, furious and come from all angles, so all that comedic energy must've been an asset…or was it?

"They encourage ad-libbing and there's a lot of funny stuff in the script but at the same time (producers are) more concerned with the story," insists Rock.

"I remember the first time meeting with Jeffrey (Katzenberg, head of Dreamworks Animation) and I remember him saying, 'We're working on the story, we'll get the jokes when we get them,' and I was so, like, offended."

Rock relents with a laugh: "As I've gotten older and done more (movies), I'm like, 'The story is the hardest part; we will get the jokes when we get them.'"

Wain makes Hollywood directing debut with Role Models

PHIL BROWN

FEATURE Writer/director David Wain has been an alternative comedy fixture for over a decade. After acting and writing on the '90s MTV series The State, he went on to direct such projects as Wet Hot American Summer and The Ten.

His latest directorial effort Role Models — opening next week — stars Paul Rudd and Seann William Scott as a pair of underachievers who are forced to join a variation of the Big Brothers.

It's the first time Wain has directed for Hollywood, something he admits made him nervous.

"I was really apprehensive, to be honest with you," Wain says. "But in many ways, I was surprised by how similar it was to independent filmmaking. My daily work schedule was the same. I was still focused on finding the best way to tell the story onscreen.

"Even more so than in independent film, where I had to wear so many different hats because there were fewer people working on it. In that way, it freed me to focus more on directing."

Role Models is certainly the most conventional movie he's ever made, but Wain was still able to wedge his subversive voice into the script and fill the cast with talented comedians, like the scene-stealing foul-mouthed youngster Bobb'e Thompson

Still, as with all of Wain's movies, most of the actors are familiar faces who he's collaborated with for years, some as far back as university.

"They're the guys who I banded together with when I was 18 years old, and they also luckily happen to be the funniest people I know."

Though he's now officially part of the Hollywood machine, Wain plans to continue working in independent film. One of the next projects he has in mind is a prequel to his beloved cult comedy Wet Hot American Summer.

"It would take place the same summer in the first day of camp, but now the actors would be 20 years too old instead of ten years too old," he said, jokingly adding, "So far, I have not gotten anyone to finance that, but maybe after Role Models, I'll be enough of a big shot."

Quote of the week

"I want to do the edgy independent movies, like (Leonardo) DiCaprio did, but you have to balance it out … it's about carving out your leading-man role. Fight Club? Yes! X-Men? Yes! All sorts of different films. American Beauty? Yes! I don't know if I could pull off a Kevin Spacey, but I'll try."

Go on, Let the Right One In

Let the Right One In

Director: Tomas Alfredson
Stars: Kare Hedebrant, Lina Leanderson
Classification: STC
Rating: ●●●●½

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

Lina Leanderson plays a teenaged vampire in the Swedish film Let the Right One In.

Like Joss Whedon's television series Buffy the Vampire Slayer, Let the Right One In uses bloodsucking as a metaphor for something else.

In Tomas Alfredson's beautifully crafted film, the tentative friendship between disturbed middle-school outcast Oskar (Kare Hedebrant) and his enigmatic, oddly agile new neighbour Eli (Lina Leanderson) gives credence to the old joke about teenage girls being wise beyond their years.

And in Eli's case, we're talking a lot of years: Alfredson doesn't try to fool the audience about who — or what — Oskar's new crush really is. In fact, what's most striking about the film, set in a small, sun-deprived Swedish town in the winter of 1982, is its matter-of-factness.

The scenes in which Eli's elderly father goes on his nightly rounds unfold with clinical detachment, and — in one memorable incident involving an over-curious poodle — teeter on the edge of black comedy.

It's possible that Alfredson pushes too hard in establishing the monstrous cruelty of Oskar's classmates, and some audience members may feel like they're being goosed into rooting for violent, vampire-assisted retribution (and make no mistake, there's some remarkably well-orchestrated carnage here).

But Let the Right One In is deceptively complex: Oskar's budding sociopathic tendencies are contrasted with Eli's sullen acquiescence to a murderous lifestyle that was decided for her a long time ago.

The fact that almost all of her victims are unpleasant middle-aged boozers is both a running joke and a sly suggestion of generational discord — in this place of perpetual midnight, the parents really don't know what their kids are getting up to in the dark.

Madonna's directorial debut not that bad

Filth and Wisdom

Director: Madonna
Stars: Eugene Grant, Holly Weston, Vicky McClure
Classification: 14A
Rating: ●●●

JIM REYNO
jim.reyno@metronews.ca

Eugene Grant

REVIEW This is it: Madonna's debut behind the camera, directing a story she co-wrote. As is her way, reaction to Filth and Wisdom is sure to be violently mixed. Some will hate it before they take that first handful of popcorn; others will be clapping before the credits roll — star struck by Madonna's cultural-icon status.

But you know what? Filth and Wisdom isn't a bad movie. Set in London, roomies A.K. (Eugene Hiltz), Holly (Holly Weston) and Juliette (Vicky McClure) are fully realized, likeable characters and their story draws you in. And as you would expect from a Madonna story, sex is a key ingredient.

A.K. is an aspiring musician who makes ends meet by performing for clients as a role-playing cross-dresser. He's also in love with Holly, a ballerina, who becomes a stripper to make extra cash (no word on whether Madonna originally named these characters Zack and Miri). Juliette turns away from her horrific past by stealing medicine from the pharmacy where she works to send to needy children in Africa.

Madonna fills out the movie with some interesting side stories about other people in the main characters' lives. Over Filth and Wisdom's 84 minutes, we watch it all come together.

There's a forced philosophical angle to Filth and Wisdom that just doesn't work. According to the movie, filth and wisdom are two sides of the same coin, and a path paved with filth can lead to wisdom, while one paved with wisdom can end in filth. Um … what?

But as a light flick about people struggling to realize their dreams, Film and Wisdom works just fine. The ending wraps up a little too neatly, but it's still an enjoyable watch.

Flatulent New Brunswick dog is headed for the big screen

MOVIES Walter the farting dog is about to explode onto the big screen.

The malodorous mutt, the main character in a series of cheeky children's books co-authored by New Brunswick's Glenn Murray, will be featured in a new Fox Studios film, slated to begin production next year.

Walter the Farting Dog, the movie, will feature the Jonas Brothers, the pop music, heartthrob trio that has attracted a legion of teenage fans — most of them girls.

"It's been amazing," Murray said from his home in Fredericton, still somewhat stunned by the global phenomenon Walter has become.

Since it was first published in 2001, the book and its four sequels have sold millions of copies worldwide.

Murray says the stories grew out of a brief but hilarious tale his longtime friend and co-author William Kotzwinkle once told about meeting a dog in the 1970s whose farts were so objectionable that he cleared an entire stationery store in Fredericton.

The movie will be produced by Bobby and Peter Farrelly, the slightly warped duo who also created Dumb and Dumber and There's Something about Mary.

The screenplay will be written by Alec Sokolow (Toy Story, Garfield) and Joel Cohen (No Country For Old Men, Fargo).

The young Jonas brothers — Kevin, Joe, Nick and the youngest brother, Frankie — will be making their feature film debut as a musical group that has to adopt the gassy canine when their aunt dies.

Jamaican music explored

Made in Jamaica

Director: Jerome Leperrousaz
Classification: 14A
Rating: ●●●

JIM REYNO
jim.reyno@metronews.ca

For many Canadians, Bob Marley is the beginning and the end of Jamaican music. Turns out the first part is right.

In his exhaustive documentary, Jerome Leperrousaz examines the state of Jamaican music today. With interviews and extensive performance footage, Leperrousaz talks to those artists who are carrying Marley's political and musical flame with reggae, as well as those on the forefront of dancehall, the sexually charged, hip-hop influenced reggae offshoot.

Some of the juxtapositions of interviews/performances in Made in Jamaica are jarringly funny. At one point, Bounty Killer discusses the lasting political impact of Marley's music, and how his art gave a voice to the Jamaican poor. Leperrousaz follows that with Elephant Man on stage, rapping about a part of the female anatomy by using a vulgar term commonly associated with a cat.

Some performances are better than others. Reggae band Third World come across as the most accomplished musically; Grammy winner Toots is an especially heartfelt, soulful vocalist.

Generally speaking, the reggae artists are more memorable, and their music seems more authentic and originally Jamaican.

The dancehall in the film sounds like generic American hip-hop/dance stuff with all the usual rap mannerisms, but performed rapid fire, and with a Jamaican accent.

It's telling that during the Elephant Man footage, one of the strongest crowd reactions comes after a sample of Usher's Yeah! is played.

Unless you're a hardcore fan, Made In Jamaica will probably be a bit long — an overload of reggae and dance-hall music.

But the documentary is very thorough and informative, and most of the artists speak well about Jamaica's musical history and their place in it.

2 films, 1 vision for director, actor

STEVE VEALE

STEVE VEALE/FOR METRO CANADA

Director Shamin Sarif and actor Lisa Ray are passionate about the two films they made together.

FEATURE In both films, two women struggle to find their own identities in repressive societies — one built during apartheid, the other a cultural creation.

Welcome to the worlds in Shamim Sarif's first two feature films: The World Unseen and I Can't think Straight.

"We were all deeply passionate about these projects," said Sarif, the writer and director of both soon-to-be-released films.

Sarif was working for her father's financial company in London when she wrote The World Unseen — "At nights and weekends to escape the daily boredom of banking," she said — about a woman's search for her own identity.

She based the story on her Indian grandparents' lives in South Africa under apartheid. She then wrote the screenplay and went after an actress who could play the repressed heroine — Toronto's Lisa Ray.

It was a mutual passion for The World Unseen – and I Can't Think Straight — which brought these two strong female voices together.

"I had been sent the script but hadn't read it," said Ray, whose breakthrough role was in Filmmaker Deepa Mehta's romantic comedy Bollywood/Hollywood. She later appeared in Metha's film Water. She was first approached to play Miriam in The World Unseen when she was taking acting classes in England.

"When we met for dinner, Hanan (Sarif's partner and producer of the film) just said, 'Why haven't you?' and made me read it. Believe me, you just can't say no to Hanan who is a force of nature."

Known for her striking looks, Ray is toned down for her role at Miriam, a 1950s subservient, downtrodden housewife. The coin is flipped in I Can't Think Straight, where Ray plays the glamourous Tala, falling in love with the inhibited Leyla — a young British Indian woman.

Like World Unseen, this film also deals with life choices: The two lovers have to decide whether they have the courage to break the bonds of their traditional Indian backgrounds.

Coming soon ...

- The World Unseen opens in Toronto next Friday, while I Can't Think Straight hits city theatres Nov. 21.

Screen Actors Guild opposes same-sex marriage ban

POLITICS The Screen Actors Guild officially stands opposed to the California ballot initiative that would ban same-sex marriage.

After weeks of being criticized for not contributing enough to defeat Proposition 8, members of the film — TV industries have recently stepped up their contributions — financial and otherwise — to fight Proposition 8.

"No actor should have to disclose his or her sexual preference in order to get health and retirement benefits," said SAG chairwoman Anne-Marie Johnson. "Being legally married means everyone is treated the same.

"It's important that we take a stand to protect all actors from discriminatory hiring practices and provide same-sex couples access to benefits."

The singing students of Albuquerque's Eastside High are back in High School Musical 3.

Beverly Hills Chihuahua

REVIEW These days, it seems Hollywood producers are all wondering the same thing: If my dog could speak, what would it say? Well, Beverly Hills Chihuahua is the latest talking animal flick to heed that query and — according to one cheeky chihuahua at least — the answer is, "Oh no she didn't!" Featuring the voices of Drew Barrymore, Andy Garcia and other celebrities, Chihuahua is a harmless "tail" (Ha!) about a snooty, rich lapdog that gets lost in Mexico and must journey back to Rodeo Drive. Along the way, she encounters a mélange of muttering mutts and an annoying animated rat-iguana duo that, in the end, teach us life lessons.

High School Musical 3: Senior Year

●●●½

REVIEW It's very likely that only a handful of adults — those with children too young to drive at home — have seen the previous two High School Musical incarnations that follow the dancing and singing students of Albuquerque's Eastside High. This is the first in the series to be made for the big screen — the other entries were made for TV — and it is a much better visual experience for young viewers, with more singing and dancing then the previous two. Adults can actually attend the movie without too much fear. Sure, the storyline is very basic, and squeaky Mickey Mouse-clean — you may doze off occasionally — but there is great energy in this film.

Max Payne

●●●½

REVIEW Max Payne is another hit video game-turned-Hollywood blockbuster. As the title character, Mark Wahlberg is an angry, maverick cop who is determined to find the savages who killed his wife and child. Shirking his civic duty, Payne conspires with a sexy assassin — Mila Kunis of That '70s Show — and discovers a dark underworld that may be connected to otherworldly demons. This thriller follows suit in the respect that it certainly seems overly focused on Payne and his quest. By doing so, other aspects (the central plot twist for instance) are too obvious and unembellished. That said, Payne knows its limitations and makes no apologies; it has absolutely stunning choreography and brooding Wahlberg was made for this kind of role. Further, and maybe most importantly, this movie is big, brash and perhaps better than any other video-game adaptation out there.

Pride and Glory

REVIEW Filmmaker Gavin O'Connor (Miracle) better hope that fans of this summer's blockbuster The Incredible Hulk follow its lead actor Edward Norton over to his new film, Pride and Glory. Unfortunately, I seriously doubt most fanboys care much for a melodrama about a family of cops. Besides, there have been more flicks made about corrupt New York City cops than Dunkin' has donuts. In this one, Norton stars as Ray Tierney, a traumatized detective who returns to the force at the urging of his police chief father (Jon Voight) to investigate the mysterious murder of four of NYPD's finest. Exploring themes of loyalty and integrity, Ray is torn between his close-knit family and the NYPD, forced to confront his own pained morality. With powerful performances, a dark and melancholic tone, and a climactic fight scene that delivers the punches with, well, a punch, Pride and Glory may be all too familiar but it's a respectably intense ride nonetheless.

Steve Gow/For Metro Canada

W.

REVIEW Perhaps the most surprising aspect of Oliver Stone's impressive film is just how rounded of a portrayal he's made of George W. Bush. Make no mistake, Stone does not present Bush as a strong leader by any stretch of the imagination, but he does at least explain how he managed to make his many mistakes in a manner that seems plausible. Josh Brolin perfectly captures all of Bush's mannerisms without ever slipping into the realm of a Saturday Night Live impersonation. It's a truly exceptional piece of acting that solidifies Brolin's sudden rise to prominence in Hollywood. Similar glowing comments can be made about the entire cast including Richard Dreyfus' subtly malicious Dick Cheney and Thandie Newton's chameleon-like transformation into Condoleezza Rice.

Director real lucky in Real Time

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Real Time could've easily have been called Real Good Timing. That's because the dark comedy stars Jay Baruchel — one of Hollywood's hottest rising stars, one of the so-called Apatow gang, and scene-stealer of such flicks as Knocked Up.

"He was just getting some heat when we went to him," boasts Real Time director Randall Cole in a recent interview. "(His fame) wasn't really a consideration for us; it was just that he could play this hyper, almost-unlikable guy and sort of someone we kind of like and dislike at the same time."

In theatres next Friday, Real Time features Baruchel as a pathetic gambler deep in debt to a gangster. As such, he soon finds himself the unwilling hostage of a rugged, middle-aged hitman (Randy Quaid) who's graceful enough to let him do whatever he wants with his final hour.

"For me, it was the character and the stuff that comes out of his mouth" admits Baruchel, a Montreal native, about what attracted him to the film. "I felt an immediate emotional connection to him — as lame as that sounds."

Jay Baruchel, right, portrays a gambler who finds himself the hostage of a hit man, played by Randy Quaid, left, in Real Time.

But working with Cole was also an enticement for Baruchel. Known for his low-budget, break-up mockumentary 19 Months, Cole is a filmmaker who likes to keep premises modest but unique.

"You have to be able to catch people's attention," says Cole. "If you're going to do something minimalist, I think you need an interesting premise to keep people's attention and make up for the smallness of production."

And Real Time is small. Shot cheaply in Hamilton, the flick is a far cry from Baruchel's experience making the $92-million US Tropic Thunder. For this rising Hollywood star, it's just that urgency that will always lead him back to Canada.

"When you have a day to do half a page or a page, you lose the spontaneity," says Baruchel of filming bloated blockbusters.

Heartbreak and Intimacy

New disc let Bloc Party frontman dish on split

IAN NATHANSON
for Metro Canada

Whatever reputed breakdown occurred between Kele Okereke and his former significant other in late 2007, the singer-guitarist frontman for Bloc Party needed an outlet to vent his feelings on the matter.

"Translucent and sun bleached skin, when did you get so L.A./how can you desert me after all we've been through/Stuck on a dream that somewhere it's better/You'll be the one missing out," Okereke sings on the electronica-meets-new wave One Month Off, from the British outfit's third full-lengther, Intimacy.

"A lot of stuff went on in the past year with my personal life that really had a huge effect on me," Okereke tells Metro, though tight-lipped on the details. "I didn't want to try and think too much about what I was saying — I wanted to write from an emotional perspective … just get it out there and move on to the next thing.

"But in writing songs for this record, I want people to see this not only about a relationship breakup but also a celebration of a love — about falling in love and being in love. It doesn't always have to be negative."

Besides, there has been enough negative-leaning talk about Okereke — from British media speculation about his sexuality to a reported backstage dust-up between the 27-year-old and The Sex Pistols' Johnny Rotten during a summer music festival in Spain — that it almost overshadows Bloc Party's more significant changes of late.

First, Okereke, guitarist Russell Lissack, bassist Gordon Moakes and drummer Matt Tong have ditched the traditional indie-rock stylings of their 2005 success story, Silent Alarm, and 2007 follow-up, A Weekend In The City. For Intimacy, Bloc Party veers into electronica-based territory and experimentation with Okereke's vocals — though maintaining Tong's fierce backbeats.

"In the 21st century, rock music should be taking more from electronica," Okereke says. "I know many bands will tell you the best records have been made between the 1950s and the 1970s. But with all the new technology available, why not have rock music embrace something a bit newer?"

Second, the band has opted to follow what's becoming a recent trend in the industry by releasing the new album digitally in August, two months ahead of this past Tuesday's physical CD release.

"I remember being a 16-year-old and how it was such a big deal when I bought a record by a band I liked and everyone else bought the same record and we were all talking about that record at the same time," Okereke says. "Now that we've built up an international fan base, why not just deliver a record to our fans at the same time, rather than have somebody leak out the record online long before it comes out?"

It's been a busy couple of weeks with a lot of stuff dropping into my inbox, into my mailbox or mysteriously across my desks (I have several offices, and thus several desks). Like the annual raking of the leaves, I thought it was time for some cleaning up.

• The Last Pogo DVD: Finally, someone has issued a proper visual document of one of the most infamous events in Canadian rock history: The "riot" at the Horseshoe Tavern on Dec. 1, 1978. Every music fan should have a copy (thelastpogo.net).

• They Want Us to Buy Vinyl Again? Listening to actual vinyl records is on the rise again, which has precipitated a series of vinyl re-releases by everyone from Led Zeppelin to the Sex Pistols. Let's see: they got us buying vinyl, then converted us to tapes, told us to upgrade to CDs, wanted us to move to digital downloads ... and now we're back to vinyl? Talk about the circle of life.

• Battle of the Divas: While all the attention has gone to the cage match between new albums from AC/DC and Guns N' Roses, there's a catfight set for next week when Britney Spears, Beyoncé, Leona Lewis and Christina Aguilera all release new albums. Too bad Mariah Carey is sitting this one out.

Madonna apparently made Guy Ritchie leave home to dine on burgers.

GETTY IMAGES

• Madonna's Divorce: Rumours were that Madge wouldn't allow anything other than steamed fish and chicken to be served in the house. If Guy wanted a burger, he had to go down to The Punchbowl, his local pub. Don't feel bad for him, though. Part of the hushed-up settlement involves him getting Ashcombe House, their $20-million, 1,200-acre estate in Wiltshire. He might even get $20 million more just so he keeps his mouth shut. Madonna, meanwhile, is worth at least $600 million US. She's fine.

• Johnny Rotten Butter: The former singer of the Sex Pistols is starring in a British TV commercial for Country Life Butter. No, I'm not making that up.

• Since It's Halloween ... A poll out this week on the 20 creepiest celebrities named Marilyn Manson at number 1 with a 76 per cent "creep factor." Michael Jackson finished second and Courtney Love ranked 11th. Keith Richards was 14th.

• Op-Ed Bono: He's got a new gig writing columns for the New York Times. This just goes to show that if I can get a column, anyone can.

Skydiggers craft new roots rock

ROBB McKAY
for Metro Canada

Even with their 20-year anniversary on the horizon, the Skydiggers are still faced with a conundrum not unlike most artists aspiring for longevity in their careers — how to break new artistic ground without alienating their fan base.

Despite the Toronto band's survival, it's a challenge that founding member Josh Finlayson says has never gone out of focus for the group.

"It's always been about trying to break new ground and at least attempting to reinvent the wheel — but ultimately you don't. Your greatest strengths are what you really want to put forth all the time, and you can't pretend to be something you're not," Finlayson tells Metro. From humble beginnings playing the Spadina Hotel in the late '80s, Skydiggers have developed their folk-based sound into a renowned brand of roots-rock with a surprisingly intense live show.

PHOTO HANDOUT

The Skydiggers' new album City of Sirens was released earlier this month. They play the Mod Club on Saturday.

"We worked really hard, we toured a lot and we have a loyal group of folks that love the band and that was never lost on us," says Finlayson.

City Of Sirens is the Juno-winning act's first album of new material in five years, and while it may not be "reinventing the Skydiggers wheel" there are a number of noticeable new keys to the group's artistic success.

"I feel like with this record, with the piano, harmonically there is a new level of maturity."

Indie act's signature sound

Energy drives Born Ruffians

ROB MCMAHON
for Metro Canada

Born Ruffians aspire to stripped-down prog-rock that runs on rhythm.

Multiple time signatures, percussive guitars, vocal yelps and youthful energy are stitched into a seamless whole.

"At our best, hopefully, our songs sound like one fluid composition, even though we've written the parts at different times," said drummer Steve Hamelin. "I don't want to compare us to the Beatles, but they hide different time signatures in a song. Someone will be singing along and not notice that suddenly they are singing to 2/4 time."

Singer-guitarist Luke LaLonde plays guitar as rhythmically as Mitch DeRosier does bass and Hamelin drums. Parts bounce off one another, rather than blend together. The resulting instrumentation helps the group switch time signatures mid-song — clean, short and snappy, it allows mid-song leaps of musical faith without sounding grating.

"We always like to have wide spacious parts, since they allow us to interact," explained Hamelin. "It's a perfect way to switch time signatures without it sounding awkward."

Ideas are approached as challenges the Toronto-based trio conceives theoretically and works up to playing. Depending on the song, parts are written either in a jam, as the result of running with a happy mistake, or written in parts and then joined afterwards. For example, Hummingbird is melded from parts written separately, whereas Badonkadonkey flowed from one session.

Toronto trio Born Ruffians are touring in support of debut album Red, Yellow and Blue.

"Sometimes we jam out ideas, but a lot of time, they come when someone's leading and makes a mistake and the others follow, and it ends up sounding good," said Hamelin.

Currently working on a follow-up to Red, Yellow and Blue, the band is harmonizing a little more. But while their singing may sound more melodic, the group's songs will retain their trademark mid-song switch-ups and nervous energy.

"People say our songs jump around a lot, and they say we're spastic and have musical ADD, but I don't think as people, we're spastic personalities," he said.

"We're just worried that with only three instruments, if we do anything for too long, it gets boring."

- The Clash, Live at Shea Stadium: On this 1982 recording the best punk band of all time may have been merely opening for the Who, but they still whipped the crowd into a frenzy with a barrage of classics like London Calling and Rock the Casbah, among others.

- Lordi, Deadache: This costume-clad heavy metal outfit from Finland takes glam rock to the next ghoulish level. Full of monster metal riffs and songs like Man Skin Boots and Raise Hell In Heaven, Deadache might be the ideal soundtrack to your Halloween party.

Man's grief plays out intimately in Bashir

THEATRE Jennifer Tarver is earning a reputation as a one-man woman — not about the stage director's personal life, but her professional one.

Her last two hit shows (Thom Pain and Krapp's Last Tape) were solo vehicles for an impressive pair of actors: Tom McCamus and Brian Dennehy.

Now she's going for the hat trick with Bashir Lazhar, opening at Tarragon next week, with the one-person cast consisting of the equally skilled Raoul Bhaneja.

"The way our emotions operate in grief is very unpredictable. The floor just drops out from under us."
Jennifer Tarver

Though she says she didn't play it that way, Tarver finds the discipline of working in a one-on-one situation an interaction with the "inner psyche of the actor" to be more demanding, but ultimately capable of great rewards.

"I find myself saying to the actor, 'This is what I think the play is going to require; now what do you think?' That way you find out where they're coming from and get everything out in the open."

Bashir Lazhar is written by Quebec author Evelyne de la Chenelière and translated by Morwyn Brebner, who enjoyed huge success at the Shaw Festival this summer with her adaptation of The President.

It tells the story of a Grade 6 substitute teacher who is replacing someone who committed suicide on the school grounds.

In Tarver's words, "We follow a multiple process of grieving, both for Bashir, who is a political refugee separated from his country and his family, and for the children, who are grieving the loss of their teacher.

"Their suffering is a cocoon that he enters to help process his own grief."

Tarver found it fascinating how closely the journey of Bashir mirrors the famous five stages outlined by Elisabeth Kubler-Ross: Denial, Anger, Bargaining, Depression and Acceptance.

Yet when she asked the author about it, she claimed to have never heard of them and said she hadn't structured the play that way.

"The way our emotions operate in grief is very unpredictable. The floor just drops out from under us. It's truly a roller-coaster ride and Raoul is the right actor to have on the journey because he's a really good roller-coaster kind of guy." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Grow a 'mo' for a cause

NOELLE MUNARETTO
for Metro Canada

Gentlemen, grab your trimmers and flex your follicles because this November it's time to bring back the 'stache.

Whether it's the handlebar, the fu manchu or the pencil, a moustache is one of the season's trendiest accessories for men, says Shawn Hewson, Project Runway Canada judge and co-founder of Canadian sportswear label Bustle Clothing.

"A moustache is a good reflection of your confidence and personal style," says Hewson.

At L'Oréal Fashion Week, male models in the spring 2009 Bustle runway show featured a variety of upper lip looks Hewson says reflects the modern, fashion-forward man.

"Facial hair, generally in men's fashions, is becoming a strong and fashionable look," says Hewson. "Guys don't accessorize a lot and this can be a natural accessory."

But growing a moustache this season isn't only good for your image. The Movember Foundation is a worldwide charity event in November that encourages guys to grow a moustache, or Mo, in order to raise funds and awareness for prostate cancer.

The foundation has raised over $29 million since it started in 2004, and funds generated in Canada from Movember events benefit the Prostate Cancer Research Foundation of Canada.

CNW GROUP/PHILIPS CANADA

Shawn Hewson, creative director Bustle Clothing and 'Mo Mentor,' gives Mike Coulson a stylish shave during the Philips-Movember Mo-Off in Toronto. It's part of an awareness and fundrasing campaign for the Prostate Cancer Research Foundation.

Men are encouraged to shave everything off on Nov. 1 and collect donations as they grow a Mo.

But, before you reach for a razor, Hewson, a Movember spokesperson, says there are certain tips and tricks to follow to ensure a perfect Mo.

"You have to grow your facial hair and see what you're dealing with," he said. "See what suits your personality and suits your face."

After you assess your hair growth and texture, Hewson said the next step is to choose a moustache style that reflects your overall image.

Once your moustache is in place, keeping it trimmed and well-groomed is essential, too.

"You don't want to be sloppy…and a moustache that is not maintained is giving moustaches a bad name," he explains. "The rest of your face either has to be clean shaven or have a five o'clock shadow."

Another key element in pulling off this look is to fully embrace your new moustache. No longer are they considered dated or tacky.

"You don't want to be sloppy ... and a moustache that is not maintained is giving moustaches a bad name."
Shawn Hewson

As for Hewson, he's proud that moustaches are "making a comeback" and is an avid Mo wearer.

On the last season of Project Runway, Hewson sported a moustache style he likes to call the "cropped Selleck." After November, he says he'll be switching to a pencil 'stache.

"I feel like it's a bit of a mysterious look, a bit sexy."

Finally, the last, and perhaps most enticing reason for men to grow a Mo, is the ladies themselves.

"Women like a quality moustache," says Hewson, laughing.

Strong signs of Life on Mars in reworked show

IntelleVision

BACK TO LIFE After following its demolition derby production history over the course of the summer, and imagining its primetime premiere as an event somewhere between the opening weekend of Gigli and the second season of Joey, I was pleasantly surprised by ABC's reworking of the BBC's time-travelling cop series Life On Mars. It's turned into a decent bit of TV that might actually get a chance to attract an audience in this season's leper's parade of shows.

Besides Harvey Keitel, who manages to be both ubiquitous and watchable — try saying the same thing about Jimmy Smits, say, or Jude Law a few years ago — one of the show's real pleasures is Michael Imperioli's take on the role of Ray Carling. As played by Dean Andrews on the British show, Carling was a relentless thug, too dim to ever take the place of his hero, DCI Gene Hunt, but with an endearing, sometimes doglike side that redeemed him.

Imperioli's Carling is much smarter, a wisecrack machine loaded to the handlebar moustache with musky '70s masculinity. "When this came along I really liked the character, I really liked the story, I liked the ideas they had for casting, and I liked being able to stay home with my family," Imperioli told the New York Times this week, one that also speculated on the show's rocky production history, which saw an almost total recasting of the show after a pilot was filmed, and a move from Los Angeles to New York City for both the setting and production.

"It is rare that a show gets piloted twice," said Gary Newman, co-chairman of 20th Century Fox Television, one of the show's producers. "I think a big part of it was, you look at the version shot in Los Angeles, and it just didn't feel like 1973; it wasn't authentic. The wardrobe, the hair, the music, the buildings — it honestly is a kind of an amazing reproduction of the era."

Run through my handy television execution decoding ring, that means that the people behind the L.A. version had better have friends at the other networks, and that the New York crew had better have a few too if the show doesn't end up getting renewed. I'm quite happy to tuck into my meal of crow at this point, if only in the hope that the success of the ABC version will finally get a DVD box set of the BBC original on shelves here.

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

Election Night
Air date: Tuesday
Network: All U.S. networks

THIS IS — and I can't believe I'm saying this — the 100th Video on Trial episode, and it will reunite its panel of comic judges and take a look back over three years of saying snarky crap about the music industry, a target as broad and wide as a battleship and as easy to hit.

Rick's TV Picks

FRANKLY, I'm sick to death of the almost endless election cycle south of the border, but since this race has been more vicious than most, there'll probably be some actual tension in the air as the results start rolling in.

Rock returns to HBO with special

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

One of the more exciting aspects of HBO Canada finally starting up in the Great White North — it launched yesterday — is that, along with great cutting-edge dramas, it will also be bringing the funny.

One man who knows this better than most is actor and comedian Chris Rock. "HBO is stand-up comedy," Rock says with a laugh. "It's the only place you really get to do it."

Rock should know. About to stun Canuck audiences with a hard-hitting fifth HBO stand-up comedy special entitled Kill the Messenger — it premieres tomorrow night — Rock will again push boundaries on a measure of topics including the U.S. election, parenthood and race with his patented unhinged, but honest manner.

"Its not just language, it's topic, too," Rock explains. "Sometimes people say, 'why don't you do a stand-up movie?' Because if I do a joke about abortion, it's going to make it an X (rating)."

Rock further points out most people don't realize the numerically-based language constraints that sidle making a film. For example, if you script a particular word that starts with a 'p' and defines a certain part of the female anatomy, "more than two times, you're an X (rating)," says Rock.

"There are all these weird little rules that just (define a movie). HBO — they just let you do whatever you want to do."

Protesters mob Olsens' event

CONTROVERSY A book-signing for fans of twin actresses Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen took an ugly turn when they were bombarded by a legion of angry protesters wearing mocking masks of the pair, imdb.com reports.

Fans lined up to meet the 22-year-old moguls, who were celebrating the release of their new coffee table book, Influence, recently.

But the pair were stunned to find animal rights activists shouting outside the event — part of a campaign launched by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) against the stars for their fashion choices.

"People who still wear fur haven't woken up to the fact that a big, dead animal on your back makes you look like a troll," A PETA spokesperson tells WENN. "Compassionate fashionistas know that real beauty comes from the heart."

Biel regrets photos

IMAGE Actress Jessica Biel regrets being pressured into topless shots for a men's magazine, imdb.com reports.

Biel was reportedly persuaded to pose for the racy pictures in 2000 to shed her angelic image. But she admits she now rues agreeing to the photo shoot.

"It was supposed to show me being sexier and more mature," she says. "The idea was: Look at me — I am a woman, growing up. I had male managers at the time, who were really excited about the photo shoot. The truth is, though, I was in way over my head. I remember calling my dad and saying: 'I screwed up. I went too far and did not stand up for myself.'"

Reid wants to start a family

FAMILY Actress Tara Reid is reportedly desperate to start a family, hinting that she is trying for kids with current boyfriend Julien Jarmoune, imdb.com reports.

The pair began dating after setting up Reid's new clothing line together.

And she doesn't want to wait to settle down and start a family, telling People magazine, "I'm ready to make a family. I want two children, a boy and a girl. And a traditional wedding, the big dress, the princess thing. What every little girl dreams of."

Victoria to pose in underwear

PEOPLE Victoria Beckham is set to follow in the footsteps of her soccer ace husband David when she strips down to her underwear to model for fashion house Armani, imdb.com reports.

The former Spice Girl will debut as the "world-wide testimonial" for Emporio Armani Women's underwear in the spring/summer 2009 campaign.

The collaboration comes months after David Beckham stopped traffic by posing scantily clad for the designer, which was unveiled on a massive billboard in California last June.

"Who better than Victoria Beckham to launch our new global Emporio Armani underwear campaign?" Giorgio Armani said in a statement.

Long tired of dating celebs

RELATIONSHIPS Justin Long has sworn off dating another celebrity because he hated having his relationship with ex-girlfriend Drew Barrymore splashed out across the tabloids, imdb.com reports.

The actor ended his year-long high profile romance with Barrymore in July.

Gossips have since linked him to another Hollywood starlet, Kirsten Dunst, but Long insists he's not interested in another A-list romance.

"It's not something I would ever consider a good thing," he tells People magazine.

The singer and her husband Rene Angelil welcomed son Rene-Charles in 2001 after undergoing fertility treatments.

Seven years later, Dion wants to attempt the process again, but she won't be too disappointed if she fails to conceive the second time around.

RUMOUR Singer Amy Winehouse has shot down rumours she could lose her voice through drug use, insisting she is hard at work on her new album, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Winehouse was said to have returned to rehab last weekend but it later emerged she had been treated at The London Clinic for a respiratory problem.

Joe O'Neill

Joe's take on celebrities

I don't enjoy thinking about the Olsen Twins, but the crusading pinheads at PETA spent a few hours yesterday protesting the fact that the girls exercise their prerogative to wear, gasp, fur. You know PETA, the group that does its part to end cruelty to animals by showing us pictures of naked models and sending out such moral paragons as Heather Mills McCartney to publicly shame celebrities who choose to wear fur, eat meat, smile or tell them that the Easter Bunny doesn't exist.

PETA's targeting of the mini-moguls doesn't end with public demonstrations, though. They've also created an online game featuring characters named Hairy Kate and Trashly Trollsen, displaying the kind of rapier wit that always seems to grace people who are the most earnest about the least important things.

Now that the PETA loonies are stepping up their anti-Olsen onslaught, I'm no longer going to be able to perversely enjoy the sensation of my stomach turning as I watch their wretched performances in New York Minute, It Takes Two or Full House reruns. I'm going to have to sympathize with them.

Recipe of the day

Poached Salmon with Dill Sauce

INGREDIENTS:

4 fresh or frozen and thawed salmon or halibut steaks, 3/4 inch thick (about 6 oz / 175 g each)
1 cup (250 mL) dry white wine or low-sodium chicken broth
1 small yellow onion, thickly sliced
2 lemon slices
4 sprigs parsley
4 whole black peppercorns

DILL SAUCE:

1 tbsp (15 mL) butter or margarine
1 tbsp (15 mL) all-purpose flour
2 tsp (10 mL) finely chopped fresh dill or 3/4 tsp (4 mL) dried dill weed
½ tsp (2 mL) sugar
1/8 tsp (0.5 mL) salt
1 large egg yolk, lightly beaten
1 tsp (5 mL) lemon juice

METHOD:

1. Rinse fish and pat dry. In a large skillet, combine the wine, onion, lemon slices, parsley and peppercorns. Bring to a boil. Arrange salmon in a single layer in wine mixture. Bring back to a boil. Lower the heat and simmer, covered, for 5 to 8 minutes or until fish flakes when tested with a fork. With a slotted spatula, carefully remove salmon from the skillet; keep warm. Strain and reserve 1 cup of the cooking liquid.
2. To prepare dill sauce, in a small saucepan, melt butter over moderate heat. Whisk in flour, dill, sugar and salt, and cook for 1 minute or until bubbly. Add reserved cooking liquid. Cook, whisking constantly, until mixture starts to thicken. Slowly stir about 1/2 cup (125 mL) of the hot mixture into egg yolk, then return this mixture to the saucepan. Cook, stirring constantly, for 1 to 2 minutes or until mixture thickens (do not boil). Stir in lemon juice.
3. Spoon some of the dill sauce over the salmon. Serve with remaining sauce.
